His brothers hate Joseph on this account, and also because of his dreams which he repeats, for they see in these dreams his superiority. Jacob sends his older sons to pasture his flocks at Shechem, and later sends Joseph to see how they are prospering. Joseph learns that they have gone on to Dothan and follows them. They see this dreamer, as they call him, approaching, and conspire to kill him, and then see what will become of his dreams. Reuben counsels them not to kill him but to cast him into a deep pit. This they do, and while they are feasting they see a company of Ishmaelites approaching and decide, on Judah's advice, to sell him as a slave. But meanwhile, Midianite merchantmen have discovered the lad, and releasing him from his prison they sell him to the Ishmaelites for twenty pieces of silver. By them he is taken to Egypt. His brothers dip his coat of many colors, a special gift from his father, in the blood of a goat and carry it back to Jacob. Jacob thinks wild beasts have killed Joseph, and mourns his death, refusing to be comforted. Joseph is sold to Potiphar, an officer of Pharaoh, and in his household he is highly esteemed for his faithful services until Potiphar's wife falsely accuses him and he is put in prison. Lesson IV. The keeper of the prison finds Joseph equally faithful and puts him...
