LAP Lambert Academic Publishing. Paperback. Book Condition: New. Paperback. 404 pages. Dimensions: 8.7in. x 5.9in. x 0.9in. American philosopher Everett W. Hall (1901-1960) was among the first epistemologists writing in English to have promoted representationism, a currently popular explanation of cognition. According to this school, there are no private sense-data or qualia, because the ascription (representation) of public properties that are exemplified in the world of common sense is believed to be sufficient to explain mental content. In this timely volume,...
