Excerpt: .but, in his best days, he was not inferior, either in correctness, coloring or force, to any of the artists of Italy. Yet, notwithstanding his uncommon merit, he bad not the good fortune, during his life, to meet with encouragement equal to his desert; for, with all his assiduity and extreme industry, he found it difficult to maintain himself and his family. He seemed to be a stranger to the artifices of the merchants, who therefore imposed on him under the disguise of zeal for his interest, and, while they artfully enriched themselves by his works, contrived to keep him depressed and narrow in his circumstances. Wouvermans could not help feeling the neglect with which he was treated; and it affected him so strongly, that, a few hours before be died, he ordered a box filled with his studies to be burned; saying, I have been so badly rewarded for all my labors, that I would prevent my son from being allured, by those designs, to embrace so miserable and uncertain a profession as mine. Some authors, however, ascribe this sacrifice to other motives, and say it proceeded from bis dislike to his brother Peter, being unwilling that he should reap the product of his labors; and some again allege that he intended to compel his son to seek the knowledge of nature from his own industry, and not indolently depend on copying those designs. Wouvermans etched one plate, representing a horse standing, and...
