Compressed gas condensers are used in connection with radiotelegraphic apparatus. Fig. 209 shows one of those installed at Arlington, Va. , by the United States Government. Working Standards of Capacity. --Though the determination of the capacity and phase angle of working standards of capacity Microfarads B Fig. 210. --Subdivided condenser. city depends ultimately upon the use of secondary air condensers, such instruments are not suitable for general use in the laboratory on account of their size, and more convenient arrangements must be employed. Ordinarily the capacity of laboratory standards is of the order of magnitude 1 microfarad. Such standards should be subdivided and made adjustable by arrangements for placing the various sections in parallel. When this is done...
