Excerpt: . . . the engineering profession and the foundation as the training obtained in school and out. It is not the illlilsslllg of information which is most highly desired, but rather the knowledge where to find that information which he needs. Memorizing of formulas is to be discouraged. By thoroughly understanding the natural laws and fundamental theories involved the necessary formulas can be derived at will. An engineer should be unafraid to trust other men with the minor details of his work. It is highly improbable that an engineer be a faultless draftsman surveyor, physicist, chemist, or mathematician. His duty is the acquaintance with the methods of instructing these men most efficiently. Because he is a better furnace care-taker than the man he has hired for that purpose is insufficient cause for discharging the furnace man. With due consideration for John Ruskins literary ability, together with appreciation of the public-s en-1 joyment of criticism, the engineer can safely plod up the rough trail, patiently awaiting the day when the world gives him his well earned welcome. g (ompany ll, Engineer Unit of the R. O. T. C. , by scoring a total of 25 points, won the annual Governors. Day competition among the companies making up the three different units of the regiment here in the University. Theodore A. Hartman 22, was captain of the winning company which was made up entirely of students of the college of applied science. This makes t0 years in succession that...
